A really nice Summary from :

Peter Howson
 Yachting Photographer

When I say "college sailing" your brain probably goes straight to big, battered passenger vans full of sleepy college kids towing trailers stacked high with tiny boats, sails, and masts. It may come as a surprise to find out that there were actually offshore sailing teams that raced last weekend in California in boats that can't be launched off a hand cart (Catalina 37s from the Long Beach Sailing Center). Even more surprising may be the fact that this regatta did not take place in San Francisco or San Diego. The third annual Harbor Cup Invitational saw sailors from 10 schools (most giving up precious spring break time) participating in the west coast's only

USC plays it cool for first Harbor Cup win

SAN PEDRO, Calif.

USC skipper Chris Vetter, having learned from heartbreaking experience, wrote a different script for his crew before racing started in the Port of Los Angeles Harbor Cup/Cal Maritime Invitational Intercollegiate Regatta.

"We have a little more time in the boat than previous years," Vetter said. "Hopefully, it's going to give us the speed to make a difference, and I should have a better feel for the boat to just sail consistently."

Bingo.

With 10 college and academy teams from the East intercollegiate big boat race run by the Los Angeles Yacht Club and sponsored by the Port of Los Angeles. Five out of state teams (Maine Maritime Academy, US Coast Guard Academy, Merchant Marine Academy, the Naval Academy, and the University of Hawai'i) made the trek to face off against five California teams (Cal. Maritime Academy, Cal. State Channel Islands, Chapman University, U.C. Davis, and U.S.C.)

At first blush, sailing a regatta in one of the busiest commercial ports in the country might seem ill advised. Turning loose 70 college kids on Catalina 37s in one of the busiest commercial ports in the country might have certain lawyers drooling with anticipation and insurance company representatives reaching for buckets, but the Port turned out to be a great venue with racing areas inside the breakwater and on the open ocean both easily accessible from the LA Yacht Club (sailing home of none other than Humphrey Bogart) docks.

Friday's racing in 9+ knots and relatively flat seas saw Navy making a strong statement with a pair of bullets with Chapman taking second in both races. Maine Maritime ended the day in third with a total of 7 points, followed by USC, Cal. Maritime, Hawai'i, USCG, CSU Channel Islands, the US Merchant Marine Academy, and UC Davis in that order.

A stiff breeze in the upper teens and big waves on Saturday moved the racing inside. This created some unique scenery with an anchored cargo ship on one side of the course, and massive cranes on the other three sides. Cal Maritime opened the day with a bullet which they followed up with a 2, they dropped a 6 in on the third race which they followed with another two and a first putting them in first. But with three races to go on Sunday their lead was no where near comfortable with USC nipping at their heels two points out of first and Maine Maritime only one more back in third. Navy ended up with an 11 in the 6th race after a protest (given the number of times they came to the windward mark on port with the rest of the fleet on starboard this seemed inevitable) dropping them to 4th over all but they were still within striking distance if they could regain their form from the first day. And with fifth place Chapman only 9 points back, there was something of a crowd at the top of the board. The rest of the order went Hawai'i, SCU Channel Islands, USCG, USMMA, and UC Davis.

Saturday night was the big dinner with a presentation from US Sailing president/ESPN commentator/Leukemia Cup Regatta national chairperson Gary Jobson in the rather huge upstairs dining room. Gary pulled in a standing room only crowd with an interesting mixture of grey hair, dreads, and military crew cuts. Gary's presentation is a constantly evolving overview of the sailing landscape with some incredible footage and stories from his sailing past. The latest version includes a quick overview of the America's Cup. There was a rather pregnant pause when the footage of Harold Bennet "chatting" with some SNG RC members in the now infamous "mutiny" incident. Gary's only comment was something to the effect of "And then there was this fiasco." eliciting both groans and chuckles.

On Sunday, the vaunted Hurricane Gulch seemed to be on some kind of union mandated break (perhaps this is the price of having a port as the sponsor), or maybe it just didn't get the memo about daylight savings time but it wasn't at all clear when the boats

Coast to Hawaii sailing Catalina 37s chartered from the Long Beach Sailing Foundation, the Trojans won only one of the 10 races over three days but had no finish worse than sixth, which nobody else could say. That erased bitter memories of finishes behind Maine Maritime Academy the first two years of the event.

But they never led until the next-to-last race Sunday.

"And going into [Sunday] we were in second place," Vetter said, sensing that same old sad result coming on.

But when Cal Maritime, the leader through seven races, stumbled to ninth place in the next-to-last race as USC placed third, the Trojans suddenly had a six-point cushion, and all they had to do as the Keelhaulers scored their third win--tops in the regatta--was to follow their rivals from Vallejo home in second place.

Vetter said, "We just wanted three finishes in the top three today, and that's what we did."

Racing moved back outside off Point Fermin Sunday after escaping rough seas by going behind the harbor breakwater Saturday, and the fleet enjoyed winds to 13 knots with smooth seas.

Only Vetter, a senior from St. Petersburg, Fla., and headsail trimmer Andrew Nunn will not return to sail for USC next year, but the rest of the crew will be intact, with bowman Alex Brock Kraebel, floater Maddie Thompson, pitman Erik Samuels, main trimmer Kelsey Rupp and trimmer Danny Kivlovitz.

The Trojans train out of the U.S. Sailing Center in nearby Long Beach under Mike Segerblom, a USC alum and the center's executive director.

Jim Morgan, race chairman for the Los Angeles Yacht Club, said, "They may have lost [football coach] Pete Carroll but they still have Mike Segerblom."

Crew member Danny Kivlovitz said, "We picked up the slack for the football team," which did not have one of its better seasons last year.

Kraebel added, "We also want to say thanks to the Los Angeles Yacht Club and the Port of Los Angeles and Cal Maritime for putting on this regatta. It's an event we really look forward to."

The Port of Los Angeles is the sponsor, California Maritime Academy of Vallejo, Calif. the inviting school and Los Angeles Yacht Club is the host and organizing authority.

CATALINA 37 ONE DESIGN BOATS headed out if they would get enough wind to start at 11:30. After a few minutes of waiting and breath holding on the RC boat, the wind seemed to realize that it was on and a nice little breeze popped up. Chapman took race 8 followed by a surprise second for Hawai'i and USC in third. Aside from Chapman and the Naval Academy changing places and moving to 4th and 5th respectively, the first race did not change the overall standings though USC did pull to within a point of CMA.

The penultimate race brought yet another shocker with the Coast Guard Academy pulling off their best result of the regatta with a first. They were followed by the USMMA in second and USC finishing in third. CMA dropped in a 9th to catapult them back to 3rd overall and that put USC in first place over all for the final race with Maine Maritime jumping to second followed by CMA in third.

A first place finish in the last race for CMA gave them a total of three bullets for the regatta but couldn't pull them past USC who took second in the last race winning the overall regatta with 34 points. Consistency is usually the winner in any regatta and with an average of 3.4 points in every race and no finish worse than 6th, USC raced a great series.

So that's all the racing details, but it has to be pointed out that the Port of LA, and the LA Yacht club ran a great regatta. And not just because the racing was well organized, the venue was beautiful with mountains in the background on one side (behind some amazingly huge machinery) and Catalina Island on the other, and the wind cooperated. This is the kind of regatta that we should see more of. Young sailors need to get experience sailing more than just dinghies if we are to seem more US sailors out in the world. It's also a great opportunity for schools to have co-ed sporting with a noticeable female presence on most of the boats, take that title 9. There are those who will bitch and moan about the fact that the regatta was run in big old lead mines, but regardless of what they were racing, seeing a fleet of 10 boats with an average crew age of 19 or 20 was a refreshing start to spring. Congratulations to all of the students who were out there sailing and thanks to the LA Yacht Club who have set a great example that should be emulated.

CHARLES E. BEVEN HOMEWARD BOUND SERIES – 2010
(the 34th year)

The rules are simple:

1. You can leave whenever you want. Any day, any time. When the wind blows, it's time to go.
2. The "winners" will be those who do their best versus their "anticipated time" if they have not yet sailed a race, or "average time" if you have been scored in more than one race.
3. In your first race, this "anticipated time" will just be my estimate. Your actual finishes will thereafter be used to modify this "anticipated time," such that (if you were to sail in three races) in your fourth race your "anticipated time" would be an average of your initial "anticipated time," and the actual times for your three completed races
4. All you need to do is sail at least 3/4th (very approximate) of the course, and report your elapsed time from the outer row of moorings to the LA lighthouse.
5. Report your elapsed time to me at: (626) 243-4145 or FinBeven@MSN.com

Results from 2008: It was a "fast" year, with some great crossings.

1. Chez Nous, with an amazing elapsed time of just 2:35, 40 minutes faster than anticipated.
2. Ripple, 2:27 elapsed, 30 minutes faster than the prior average.
3. Callisto, 2:48, 15 minutes faster than prior average.

Results from 2009:

1. Callisto. 2:50, -:14.
2. Ventana. 2:45, -:13
3. Ripple (in cruise mode). Also with a 2:45 crossing.
